Faces of Alaska: Lance Mackey. January 6, 2011

Where does Lance Mackey get his toughness? Some of it comes from his family, for sure. On Faces of Alaska, Lance talks about his family's sky-high ambitions and the strong personalities that shaped who he is today. Alaska genealogist Barbara Samuels assisted with family research on this project. Join host Kathleen McCoy and Lance Mackey as they talk about his banker grandfather from New Hampshire, why his dad set out for Alaska in the 1950s, his mother's sprint dog-mushing prowess and her own father's Alaska gold-mining ambitions. The Mackey family story – one of grit, enterprise and enormous energy – is truly an Alaska story.

Alaska Far Away captures the compelling story of the Midwestern pioneers who came to Alaska to build a new community and portray a new national spirit.

Documentary: Junk Dreams

November 30, 2010

KAKM premiered "Junk Dreams," a documentary that follows a pair of brothers in their 80s as they sail from Washington to Valdez, Alaska in an old Chinese junk boat. This film screened at the Anchorage International Film Festival in 2008 to a sold-out audience. Filmmaker Skye Borgman will join us to talk about the journey at sea, while providing some behind-the-scenes commentary on filming aboard an old junk boat. Afterward, Tony Shepherd, founder of the Anchorage International Film Festival, will join us in the KAKM studios to share his thoughts on the burgeoning film culture in Alaska.

Documentary: Mr. Alaska: Bob Bartlett Goes to Washington

Mon, November 29, 2010

This documentary, Mr. Alaska: Bob Bartlett Goes to Washington tells the story of one man's political, professional and personal journey from the streets of a gritty gold-rush town to the halls of the U.S. Senate. Edward Lewis "Bob" Bartlett represented Alaska in Washington D.C. for more than two decades, first as Alaska's Territorial Delegate to Congress and later as the state's first Senator. Bartlett's most exclusive distinction: he helped create the very state he served. We were joined in the studio by Vic Fischer, well-known member of the Constitutional Convention.
